

PRAY AND WORK IN NEW ORLEANS

Ministers Leave Their Pulpits To Aid In Cleaning Streets Of The City.

GIVE ADVICE TO THE POOR PEOPLE

Pastors Visit The Afflicted Districts To Instruct People
In Proper Methods To Wipe Out Pest.

New Orleans, July 31.—While in every church in the city yesterday people of every class and faith knelt and prayed for relief from the spread of yellow fever in the city, hundreds of others spent the day cleaning the gutters and streets of the city and pouring oil upon the cisterns and stagnant pools. The official report of the spread of the disease, issued last night, is as follows: New cases, 27; new deaths, 3; new foci, 4; total cases, 233; total deaths, 57; total foci, 42.

Every minister and every priest took the visitation of the city as the theme for his sermon and exhorted the people to push the work of cleaning the city. In every pulpit the mosquito theory of the spread of the fever was told, and the people are better than ever before equipped to make the fight which they have before them.

Supply Oil and Screens.

In the afternoon the citizens of each ward held meetings at which the work accomplished was told and new men assigned to continue the work. All day long squads of men armed with oil cans and screen wire made house-to-house canvasses and put an end to an mosquito life in cisterns. Reports show that up to the present time over 10,000 cisterns have been screened and that over 100,000 gallons of oil have been used. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being raised and spent on the fight.

Rev. Dr. Beverly Warner led his church in prayers for relief, then put aside his priestly robes, donned a white duck suit and a few moments after the benediction had been pronounced in Trinity church was speeding through the infected districts in an automobile. Other ministers have joined in the work and are making personal visits among their poorer parishioners and explaining to them the means of preventing infection.

Death Rate Is Lower.

The death rate in proportion to the number of cases is lower, but this is in part due to the fact that many of the new foci are located in the better parts of the city.

The panic among the Italian people in the poorer quarters continues, and they may be seen at all times of the day.

TALK OF RETIREMENT IS MERELY GOSSIP

Aged Secretary of Agriculture Wilson Is Now in Poor Health.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, July 31.—Each day the rumor that Secretary of Agriculture Wilson will soon retire grows stronger, and it is stated now that he would have left the Cabinet even had not the cotton scandal cropped out, although Mr. Roosevelt wants it perfectly understood that he considers that Secretary Wilson knew nothing of the "leakage" which has resulted in such an uproar. It is said by a high official, unofficially, that probably before Congress reconvenes, there will be a new Secretary of Agriculture. Although the present incumbent has had abundant experience and accomplished much, it is understood that the President is seeking for a man to put at the head of the department who will keep his eyes and ears a little wider open, so that the underlings during the balance of his administration may not have the opportunity to juggle or sell information regarding cotton, tobacco, rice or any other staple.

The trials are expected to bring out startling testimony and a bitter fight will be made to free the accused.

Refuse Plea.

The trial of ex-Senator Ferris was called this morning and the judge overruled a motion to quash the indictment. The defendants then asked for a change of venue alleging Judge Martin is prejudiced. It is expected the trial of ex-Senator Smith will be called today.

Moral Courage.

It is moral courage that characterizes the highest order of manhood and womanhood, the courage to be just, the courage to be honest, the courage to resist temptation, the courage to do one's duty.—Samuel Smiles.

ENGLAND WANTS A JAP VICTORY

London Opposes An Armistice While Terms Of Peace Are Being Arranged For.

HAS CONFIDENCE IN JAP ENVOYS

King Edward's Diplomats Are Certain That The Demands Of The Mikado's Representatives Will Be Complied With.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-MORSE.]

Washington, July 31.—Diplomatic exchanges which have passed between Great Britain and the United States convince those in this country working for peace in the Russo-Japanese war that Lord Lansdowne and his associates will fight an armistice.

Great Britain, as a humanitarian nation, desires peace, but as the steadfast ally of Japan, wants a Japanese victory more.

Embodied in this stand of Great Britain is a rebuff to the diplomats who have been acting on the policy of the late Secretary Hay.

Suggestions were recently made that Great Britain, in the interests of peace, might advise Japan to modify her demands upon the Russians.

Refuses to Render Assistance.

This suggestion, coming almost from President Roosevelt himself, was answered by the declaration that no assistance along this line will be rendered to Washington.

At the same time the London government in its exchanges with the American embassy has not hesitated to declare its confidence that Japan's terms will not be unreasonable.

Believing as Washington does that Japan will not insist on the dismantlement of Vladivostok should Russia fail to agree to it in return for the neutralization of Port Arthur, the cession of Sakhalin, which will probably be among the essential conditions, will, officials here believe, prove the tremendous obstacle to peace in the far East.

Wants to Keep Sakhalin.

When the president initiated his efforts to bring the belligerents together. The fact that up to that time Japan had not taken a foot of Russian territory simplified, in the opinion of Washington and Berlin, the problem of bringing about peace negotiations.

It is understood that Russia will vigorously oppose the cession of Sakhalin. Whether, in the event of Japan's insistence on this as a condition precedent to peace, Russia will yield, is a matter of speculation so far as the officials here are concerned.

Keen interest is felt here in the negotiations, which, it is understood, are making substantial headway, between Japan and England looking to the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The scope of the alliance, it is known, will considerably exceed the present union, though to what extent neither Europe nor Washington has been able to learn.

Stoessel Is Relieved.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—General Stoessel has been relieved of the command of the Third Siberian army corps.

The emperor has issued the following note in reply to an appeal from the clergy of Orenburg not to conclude a shameful peace:

"The Russian people can rely on me. Neither will I conclude a shameful peace or one unworthy of great Russia."

A feature of the meeting was the perfect harmony of the work conducted by Norwegian and Swedish Methodist churches, who forgot all about the present trouble in their respective countries in the effort to save souls.

IOWA WOMAN LOSES MIND WHEN LAND DISAPPEARS

Unable to Stop the Missouri River From Swallowing Up His Farm, the Owner Becomes Insane.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-MORSE.]

Cherokee, Iowa, July 31.—Standing helplessly by and watching great slabs of his $100 a acre farm falling into the voracious maw of the Missouri river, Samuel A. Bessette of this county lost his reason and is now in the state asylum for the insane at Cherokee. The river is just now receding from its highest point in twenty years and its furious current has done untold havoc to farms both in Iowa and Nebraska.

Farmers in Lakeport, who three years ago lost from ten to eighty acres each by the inroads of the Missouri, have been robbed further this summer. Bessette, who went insane, has so far only lost a few acres, but for a week he has been worried and sleepless because he saw the stream slowly encroaching on adjoining land, knowing that his would soon be reached. When the big chunks of land and large trees were wrested away and whirled off down stream Bessette lost his mind.

"Film-Flams."

Isaac Disraeli wrote "Film-Flams" in 1805. He was father of the great Benjamin Disraeli, as every one knows, and a most peculiar mental genius. "The Life and Errors of My Uncle and the Amours of My Aunt" is the subtitle of "Film-Flams." Rather enticing, eh? Film-flaming was practiced many decades ago, very much as it is today.

Regretted Contemporary's Loss.

It is a pathetic as well as a humorous remark that Laurence Hutton in his reminiscences attributes to John L. Sullivan. When the news came of the death of Edwin Booth, the great fighter, in sincere sorrow, remarked: "Well, there are only a few of us left."

TALK HEARD OF AN AUDITORIUM

QUESTION OF BUILDING ON THE CHAUTAUQUA GROUNDS.

BIG ATTENDANCE YESTERDAY

Fully Four Thousand Visited the Groups—Three Great Sermon-Lectures Delivered.

(By Clarence Van Buren.)
Gazette Headquarters, Chautauqua Grounds—Previous to the opening of the program last evening, Agent H.

L. B. WICKERSHAM.

M. Holbrook, congratulated the large assembly of Janesville people upon the success which had greeted and thus far attended the first Chautauqua ever held here. He said, and he speaks knowingly for he has been instituting and conducting Chautauquas for the past five years, during which time the greatest growth of this movement has been, that the audience yesterday were the largest he had yet seen at a Chautauqua in its initial year. Fully four thousand people visited the grounds during the entire day, enjoying one, two or all of the sessions. The hearty reception that was given on the day's program pre-establishes a permanent Assembly here and talk of building an auditorium at Mole's Grove is heard. Dr. Grant in introducing the afternoon numbers described the construction of such a building before next year. As an instance of what could be done, he cited the case of a little western town of about four thousand inhabitants, which raised $20,000 after the first Chautauqua ever conducted at the place and erected some of the finest Assembly halls in use for such purposes. Other cities have also built auditoriums before their second year's program. Every one who visited the Grove yesterday became Chautauqua enthusiasts, so greatly that many even were forgetful of the day and place and loudly applauded the sacred music and the sermons.

Great Sermon-Lectures.
Three great sermon-lectures were addressed to three large audiences by noted Chautauqua speakers yesterday and music was furnished by the Jubilee singers, the Morphet and Stevenson Saxophone quartette and Miss Ella Richards of Sterling, Ill., who rendered several solos. In the morning Dr. Grant, who has been made pastor of the Assembly spoke on "How to Spell Hell with Five Letters" in the afternoon the Reverend Dr. L. B. Wickersham delivered a discourse on "Lose Him and Let Him Go" and in the evening Lecturer Clark stirred up his hearers with his sermon, "Play Ball." Miss Richards is a singer of no little note and her solos were appreciated. Her voice is sweet, clear and beautifully toned and over it she has complete control. Her appearance and expression added to her numbers.

The Old Religious Melodies.
The Dixie warblers pleased decidedly, as they have on all occasions. Their selections were from the recent religious music and the old folk songs of the negro. These latter songs come from the down-south plantations where they have been sung for years Sabbath. The company will make their final appearance here this evening and it will be with regret that the audience will listen to their last number. Their concerts have been stellar attractions and enthusiasm has been heaped upon them. The personnel of the troupe is as follows: M. Buckner, soprano; Miss Belle Hooker, contralto; Robert L. Moore, first tenor; George C. Hall, second tenor; A. B. Willoughby, baritone; W. C. Buckner, second bass; M. Viola Spike, pianist. Mrs. Kitchen also accompanied Miss Richards.

The Spelling of Hell.
Dr. Grant delivered the address of the morning, taking for his text, the experiences of life. His pinnacles of thought were well built and clearly outlined and the spelling of hell with the following five letters, h-a-b-i-t, marked the climax of his able discourse. He said in substance that the Bible is not a statute book but a volume of facts. It tells in varied ways what the laws of nature are but lays down not one of them. The laws recognized or unrecognized work. In the acquirement of the drink habit man is at first warned that it will be injurious to his health by a headache. If he refuses to accept the admonition it ceases and when he wishes to throw off the habit it is too late. This is the working of the law. If you do not heed the rules of nature, she will laugh at you when calamity comes.

Playing With Live Wires.
The minor sins of swearing, lying, breaking the Sabbath and others are not in themselves greatly injurious but they are liberating forces which the sinner will later be unable to control. These are the live wires of the spiritual world and they can no more be played with than live wires in the physical realm. The seven forces which make all plant life grow are the same ones which make each individual part of the vegetable world have passed a certain point and in the destruction. So in the spiritual life of man the same forces with which he may build himself up will tear him down into hell if he does not obey the laws. A man cannot be reformed after he has gone so far and to get back into the better life a sinner must die and be born again. The last words of the book of revelation express the thought that he that is holy will become more holy and he that is filthy will become more so.

The Losing of Souls.
In the afternoon Dr. Wickersham spoke. His theme was, "Lose Him and Let Him Go" and was taken from the Bible description of the resurrection of Lazarus. Lazarus when he died was embalmed according to the eastern customs. Each portion of the body being wound separately from the other and when Christ raised him from the dead he was bound hand and foot. He was restored to life but it was necessary to lose him and let him go. The great work of life is to free souls and let them go. Each soul is born into the world but it is the labor of man to start these souls to thinking, to believing and loving. The cleansing of souls can be done by man alone and that is why this life is worth living. The blessings of the world come from those who free souls and set them to the great work of life. William Hawley Smith for the past few years has been delivering a famous lecture on the subject, "Born Short," but it is not the fact that matter that in more cases souls are nearer short, are not lost? Dr. Wickersham is an orator of rare ability and expression and not once did he lose the attention of the audience.

Clark on "Play Ball."
Last evening Dr. Clark occupied the platform and delivered his famous lecture on "Play Ball." He said in opening that he considered no harm in laughing on Sunday and that which is not fit to be said from the pulpit is not fit to be said in any place. He followed this idea in his sermon and illustrated it with humor and wit. Dr. Clark compared life to the great American game of baseball. In this sport an opportunity is furnished each player to show what he can do. Each player has the ability to negotiate some position and so in life each person is blessed with the power to do something to help win. Opportunity is always knocking. At this point Mr. Clark entered an earnest protest against that little poem which has commanded so much attention throughout the land, written by Senator Ingels, and which hangs over the President's desk at Washington, expressing the sentiment that opportunity comes but once. Opportunities are always presenting themselves but with what readiness they are grasped depends upon the preparation of the person. If he has practiced hard and pluckily and paid the price of learning he will play ball and win. A game of ball may depend upon an individual at times but team work is also necessary. No one player is independent of the other and no one person in life, no one community, no one nation is independent of any other, no matter how small or insignificant. The umpire in the game represents law. His word must be obeyed; if not he penalizes. So in life the laws of nature rule. The score is also kept and each player tries his best to make a clear record for there is reward afterwards—next season—while the reward of a clear record in life is the after world.

The Humorous Lectures.
On Saturday afternoon one of the most pleasurable portions of the entire Chautauqua program was presented to a fair sized audience. The Morphet-Stevenson Novelty company and saxophone quartette were to have furnished the entertainment but connections were missed in Chicago, the troupe being unable to get across the city with six heavy pieces of baggage in half an hour, and Herbert Leon Cope delivered his humorous and pathetic lecture, "The Smile that Went Come Off." He pleaded for the ever ready, hearty laugh that covers up much that is not agreeable in life. Man is the only animal with the power of laughing and the speaker said that he believed this privilege had been bestowed upon the human race to laugh away the peculiarities and oddities of different people. We laugh at the foreigner and he laughs at us, the bachelor enjoys fun at the expense of the married man and the married man in turn smiles at the plight of the bachelor, the city man jokes fun at the rural resident and the rustic delights in the ignorance of the city bred man and so on, all the fun and merriment coming more from real life than from original jokes. Cope's address was a texture of humorous tales, impersonations, pathos and truth and soon after he said there was little difference between smiles and sobs he moved his hearers from roars of laughter to tears. Many debts can be paid with smiles and love, the bills that children owe to their parents for youthful protection and kindness can be partly canceled by a cheery expression in the home and a few good old fashioned hugs. Perpetual good humor man can cultivate in himself. It does not come nor can it be purchased. The world bows submissively to wealth but money has not the power of procuring happiness. In speaking of the altogether too busy world he rapped Frances Hodgson Burnett severely. He told how her brother several years ago was buried from a morgue in one of the southern cities and now occupies a poster's grave, and she was too busy to even pass a word of sympathy—who was writing Little Lord Rutherford stories for the children and women of the land to shed tears over. There should be smiles everywhere and they should not be of the veneered kind, that are worn in society but cast aside for crossness and disagreeableness in the home.

Saturday Evening.
On the evening of Saturday the program consisted of a concert in two parts by the Dixie Jubilee warblers and some "chit music" by Henry Clark. Each musical number was deservedly applauded. Each member of the troupe furnished one or more excellent solos and the two piano renditions and an encore by Mrs. Kitchen were faultless, though each was decidedly difficult. The bell chorus, the selection from the opera, "The Strollers," entitled "Lessons in Filtration," and the burlesque on the negro revival meeting melodies all enchanted the audience. Mr. Clark presided in place of Dr. Grant and between the two parts of the musical program he told a number of humorous stories and read one piece so touchingly that he was requested by the audience to repeat the selection last evening. The request was not granted. The tale that the verses told was of an English life saver rescuing unknowingly his own lost son, while his wife lay deathly sick at home. The picture of a happy reunion followed the wonderful description of the brave scene on the beach and terrible waters.

* PEOPLE AND EVENTS ON * * THE ASSEMBLY GROUNDS *

Many more tents for campers were newly stretched today and nearly twenty families are encamped upon the grounds. Among those who are living in the grove during the Chautauqua are: R. W. Clark and family, P. A. Spoon and family, A. W. Hall and family, W. J. Cannon and family. Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Tolles of Evansville were among the Assembly visitors yesterday.

Some complaint is heard about the lighting of the grounds, the incandescent lamps showing brightly at times and becoming dim at others. This "bobbing," as Dr. Clark termed it Saturday evening, is caused by the source of current. In the city the lighting electric current is one hundred and fifty volts while that on the grounds comes through the trolley line wires and has a voltage of five hundred. When a car is started at the north end of the line, the larger part of this current is used and as a result the lamps on the ground are robbed of the current necessary to furnish the usual amount of light. To pass the regular lighting current through the wires at the grounds would necessitate quite an extension of the lighting wires and be of much expense.

Miss Basha Pease of Fulton is attending a number of the Chautauqua programs. Several hundred dollars have been raised by a number of business and professional men in Belvidere for a return engagement of Dr. Roland Dwight Grant. Dr. Grant delivered a series of lectures and conducted a morning round table at the Chautauqua in that city, similar to his portions of the Janesville program and they proved so popular that he will be forced to repeat the lectures and deliver further ones there in the near future—as soon as the dates can be arranged.

About three hundred persons were fed at the Chautauqua restaurant both at noon and in the evening yesterday. Numbers of people came out to the grounds in the morning and did not return until after the evening session. Many of these came armed with large lunch baskets, containing enough for two meals and enjoyed both a dinner and a lunch on the side of the hill to the north of the large tent where there is abundant shade and a beautiful carpet of green grass, an ideal picnic-dinner table.

W. C. Buckner, manager of Ferguson's Dixie Jubilee singers is a personal friend of Charles Wood, the Beloit college boy, who is now teaching at Booker T. Washington's school at Tuskegee, Alabama. Mr. Wood won high honors for the Line City institution in the interstate college oratorical contest one year and was the star of one of the Greek plays. He delivered a lecture on the High School Course here several years ago.

WASHINGTON LETTER ON MOOTED SUBJECTS

New Feature of The Gazette's Foreign Service Begins in the Following Letter.

From William Wolff Smith, (Special Correspondence.)
Washington, D. C., July 31.—The announcement made a few days ago that the United States Government was distributing ethnologic sketches of John D. Rockefeller has attracted a great deal of attention, especially because of the flattering character of the biography and the report that it was especially prepared for the Bureau of Education under John D. Rockefeller. Perhaps the most interesting paragraph of the biography is this: "It is of interest that the training of the family is yielding results like those displayed in his good character. His son, a graduate of Brown University, is already walking in the ways of his father and the whole public he enlists in the plan of benefits which he is working out and which is promising more than is already accomplished." If the true character of John D. is anything like what the public believes it to be, the intelligence that his son is preparing to follow in his father's footsteps is disagreeable indeed. The mulcting of the people by means of the suppression of competition and the securing of illegal rebates from public carriers in order that a title of the illegitimate gains may be returned to a portion of the people in the form of educational benefactions does not strongly appeal to Americans who have not yet learned to kiss the hand that smites them. Nor will a certificate of good character from the Bureau of Education be sufficient to wipe out the memories of twenty years of law breaking and the squeezing process yet in vogue under which the poor people who burn petroleum are compelled to involuntarily contribute to education sums of money for whose giving, John D. Rockefeller seeks to obtain credit.

It is noteworthy that the attorneys for John D. who now seem to be making a desperate effort to secure for him a more favorable opinion from the people who the Standard Oil Company has so long and so thoroughly oppressed, are preparing to republish the biography sent out by the Bureau of Education of the United States Government and to circulate the same as a sort of official bill of health.

In the sketch a new version—and it must be regarded as authentic since it was probably prepared under his direction and is published by the U. S. Government—is given of how the Standard Oil Company came into existence. "He early began to appreciate the efforts to secure cheap lighting illumination," says this remarkable document, "Crude petroleum was offensive to the smell. He saw what was needed and out of his school chemistry he was aided in devising methods of purifying the crude oil." He said to one of his teachers: "I think I can relieve this substance of its offensive smell." His efforts were successful. While oil was disappearing from the market, the new substance was soon widely demanded by the trade; fabulous results followed his efforts. From this it will be observed that the charges made against the Standard Oil Co. and John D. in particular, have been all wrong. He made his fortune by eliminating the smell from petroleum.

Wishing to preserve in my library the government publication, which contains this touching biography of the world's richest man, I sent to the Bureau of Education. But alas, there are no copies available for general distribution. So great has been the demand from the public schools that there are not even enough to supply these institutions but no doubt this will be remedied for the printing of additional copies. It is contained in chapter XXIX of the annual report for 1903 of the Commissioner of Labor, Volume 2, Pages 3141-42. In view of the demand a circular has been prepared by Commissioner W. T. Harris in which it is explained that this volume may be consulted in any of the larger public libraries. He also remarks that it was "prepared for the said report by Gen. John Eaton, formerly Commissioner of Education." The notice of Mr. Rockefeller occupies two pages, being one of thirty-nine similar sketches treating of "Educational Benefactors." I mention the above so that any one desiring to know how truly great and good John D. is, they can consult the document in any of the Carnegie libraries.

One quarter of a cent per year for carrying the United States mails daily a distance of seven and three-fourths of a mile and back again. How's that in comparison with some of the enormous salaries drawn by officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Association and other corporations and then ponder on the difference in pay-rolls. But it happens in this case that Uncle Sam would have paid more but he was not asked.

Adriel L. Stuart, of Freedom, New Hampshire, when bids were called for carrying the mails six times a week from Freedom to a station a fraction more than seven miles distant, submitted a bid offering to do this for a period of four years between July 1, 1901 and June 30, 1905 for one cent. He bid this low figure because of the prestige it would give him to have the sign "U. S. Mail" on his wagon which covered the ground every week day, year in and year out, in the transportation of passengers. Stuart has fulfilled his contract to the letter and a few days ago a warrant on Uncle Sam's Treasury for one cent was made out and sent this contractor in payment of his salary for the period of four years. This is the smallest treasury warrant ever issued and instead of having it cashed Mr. Stuart will frame it.

Many odd publications have found their way into the Congressional Record and thereby secured the privilege of being sent through the mails free of postage under a congressional frank, but the most unique thing in this line is a recent compilation gotten up by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, head of the International Reform Bureau of this city. Mr. Crafts envisions the distinction of having had introduced into Congress more reform measures on different subjects than any man who ever frequented the National Capitol. Many of these have been buried in committee never to be heard of again; some have been advocated on the floor and speeches championing them have been made.

Under the caption of "Patriotic Studies" Mr. Crafts has compiled all these measures of his own and every reform that has been suggested, the speeches that have been made and all data submitted to Congress. It makes a book of almost 300 pages and is not only sent through the mails free but is accompanied by a franked envelope in which the recipient is requested to return the book if he does not care to pay thirty-five cents asked for it and help along the cause of reform. Several officials of the post office department refused to sanction such a use of the franking privilege, but one "higher up" decreed that inasmuch as the stuff had all appeared in the Congressional Record the postal authorities had no Crafts' book is helping to swell the daily bulk of ranked mail out of Washington.

Anybody having a supply of white mice on hand can get rid of them to the government at 25 cents each and the government will be glad to get them at that price. This is not a rat story but a serious proposition from a most scientific bureau known as the U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. These mice are wanted for purposes of inoculation in testing serums for the treatment of diseases. Thousands of these little rodents have met their fate through these experiments and the contract enjoyed by a local animal dealer in supplying these animals has grown beyond his power to supply. The chief of the Hygienic laboratory applied for authority to purchase the necessary mice in the open market and the assistant secretary of the treasury approved it in the interests of science and mankind generally.

The magnificent Congressional Library with its 1,200,000 volumes is being added to annually at the rate of 20,000 books a year. It is not the largest collection in the world, but is a very complete one. The library of France with 2,700,000 volumes ranks first and the Library of the British Museum with two million comes second. The books added to the Congressional Library every year are in every civilized tongue although the majority are in English and about one-fifth of American authorship. Mr. Ainsworth R. Spofford, who as assistant and as Librarian has been connected with the library for the past forty years, declares that one notable fact brought out in the acquisitions of the past few years is that Americans are making an introspective study of themselves. Many of the books and much of this is true with the fiction, deal with our own history. Every period has found an explorer and in economics and the special lines of national development there seems to be an attempt to get at the truth such as was never made before. In 1900 there were 6550 permanent publications copyrighted while last year the were 12,000, more than doubling the number in five years. That the people of this country are becoming more interested in the drama is evidenced by the fact that the number of dramatic compositions increased from 501 in 1900 to 1224 last year. The small proportion of permanent publications written by Americans as compared with Englishmen is attributed to the large number of newspapers in this country through which public opinion is expressed and public sentiment in great measure molded. Many more students use the library in winter than in summer and men and women come from all parts of the country to avail themselves of its vast resources. In the reading room history is read more than any other subject; fiction, science, genealogy and belles lettres following.

One of the chief supports upon which the Japanese government will lean during the peace negotiations will be an American citizen who for 25 years has been the legal adviser of the Mikado's big men and it is a singular coincidence that these negotiations will be conducted within the confines of that American's native state. That man is W. H. Dennison, of New Hampshire. Japanese officials state that Mr. Dennison has been of the greatest possible value to their government. He played a prominent part in the preparation of the treaty that ended the war between Japan and China. He represented Japan at the conferences growing out of the Boxes uprising and is credited with having drawn up the secret agreement that made Japan and Great Britain allies and threw the moral force of that powerful nation against Russia in the present war. And now, when the time has arrived to arrange terms for its conclusion in which the United States will have an interest that is vital to her commercial future in the Orient, it falls to the lot of an American to play a leading role.

When half a dozen torpedo boat destroyers recently cruised from the Atlantic to Manila their voyage was regarded as especially hazardous. It was so successfully performed, however, that orders have been issued for six torpedo boats in the reserve force at Norfolk to journey to the Philippines via Suez Canal. Because of their small capacity the route will be very long and it is estimated the cruise will occupy at least six months. It is considered just as well to have a pretty good naval force in the Philippines at this time.

Baron Bunsche of the German Embassy has delivered to the State Department a silver watch and chain with the request that they be handed to George C. Ellis, a negro laborer at the Washington barracks as a recognition of the German Emperor of the action of Ellis in saving the statue of Frederick the Great from damage by the explosion of a package of dynamite placed on the fence surrounding it by a man named Roseman with the idea of destroying it. On the back of the watch appears the imperial monogram. The watch and chain are enclosed in a handsome leather case.

Since the Washington monument was opened to the public October 9, 1888, up to June 30, 1905, 2,573,699 visitors have ascended to the top, a majority of them preferring to use the elevator rather than climb the 550 feet of stairway. During the past fiscal year the number of visitors was 130,803 of which number $9,235 used the elevator. This number included the guides.

Friends of Ernest Cole who is now serving on the U. S. Signal Corps in the Philippines have received some interesting letters from him. The latter has been doing duty recently at Camp Dargo, located on one of the islands about 400 miles from the city of Manila.

Fair tonight and cooler with fresh northerly winds.

If, in store-advertising, "the wish is father to the thought" of effective publicity, and grandfather to the act, the trio should form a happy family.

THE BENNINGTON'S BOILERS.

The tragic event which occurred in San Diego Harbor will make a peculiar appeal to human sympathy.

When the soldier and sailor enlist in the service of their country, they have a full knowledge of the perils to which they will be exposed in time of war. Moreover, if they die in battle there are many consolations for those that love them. To lose one's life in time of peace is a fate unusual, unexpected, less glorious and affording less solace to those who are obliged to mourn.

The explosion of the Bennington was as little to be anticipated as the sinking of the Maine in 1898 or that of the British battleship Victoria off the Syrian coast nearly five years before. In the extent of the bereavement which was caused the latest of the three disasters is not comparable with the others. Nearly four-hundred men were drowned by the collision between Admiral Tyrone's flagship and the Camperdown while manoeuvring, and Captain Sigbee lost more than two hundred and fifty in Havana Harbor. If one adds to the number of those who are known to have died at San Diego that of the missing and makes a further allowance for the probable death of a few of the most badly injured, the total mortality can hardly exceed seventy or seventy-five.

There can be little doubt that the explosion which has been attended with such sad consequences was due primarily to a miscalculation in regard to the exact condition of one of the Bennington's boilers. Within the last ten months they had been inspected at least three times, and the advisability of repairs having been pointed out, work was done which it was hoped might keep them in a serviceable state a little longer.

Whether or not anybody is to blame for the degree of confidence which was felt regarding their fitness can be determined only after an official investigation has been held. For the present it would be cruel to attempt to pass judgment on the question.

Much has been heard in the last few years about the scarcity of educated engineers in the American navy, and the inadvisability of in-trusting the care of engines and boilers to machinists. Possibly a disposition will be manifested to attribute the accident on the Benning-

Like Stephenson says the trouble with Rock county is that there are too many passes held by citizens here. Not now, Mr. Stephenson.

Some day some people will appreciate the Rock river, but just at present they do not seem to do so.

So La Follette would like to hang Mr. Fish. Well, Mr. Fish does not live in Wisconsin so he is safe.

Even slow trains run off the track once in a while and are no safer than eighteen hour limited.

Bryan spoke at Madison on Friday night last and all held their ears and listened.

The Chautauqua appears to have the front and center of the stage just now.

Boom Janesville and you boom your business.

PRESS COMMENT.

Marquette Eagle-Star: Fighting railways sometimes comes expensive to people who like to get free transportation.

Racine Journal: Chicago is to have a $300,000 professional cooking school. This is Chicago all over, always thinking of its stomach.

El Paso Herald: Governor Hoch of Kansas, himself a republican, is booming Governor Folk of Missouri for president; says that he would make an ideal executive.

Exchange: The ingratitude of China in boycotting American goods after all the United States has done to Chinamen is positively destructive of faith in humanity.

Delavan Enterprise: Beloit did not reach the mark of 14,000 set by enthusiasts, its population being 12,865.

Superior Telegram: It is said that the canal industry down on the isthmus is booming the price of pyrethrum to beat the price. The commodity is used to stupefy mosquitoes and annual other vermin.

Evansville Review: The Janesville, Edgerton and Northern is the name of a new electric road proposed to be built on paper, between Janesville and Waupun. It will be completed during the present century.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Among Chicago's 2,272,750 people there are 6,700 Johnsons, 5,000 Smiths and 4,400 Andersons. Those flourishing families will soon be big enough to have directories of their own.

Evening Wisconsin: Count Boni de Castellane, who tried without success to inaugurate the fad of wearing a light overcoat all summer, may be said to have fallen "in the heat of the engagement."

Appleton Post: The population of Racine, according to the recently completed count, is 22,382. She is therefore the third city in size in the state, Superior having a population of something over 25,000.

Chicago Record-Herald: A Pittsburg splinter killed $600,000 to her old sweetheart, who had married an other woman. But wait. Don't get excited. She provided that he would have to secure a divorce from the other woman in order to get the money.

Menasha Record: We haven't noticed that all this cussing of John D. Rockefeller and the other pocketfuls has tended very strongly to discourage the two or three other searchers for the pocketful of whom we have happened to hear.

Chicago Daily Journal: A contemporary criticizes Grover Cleveland for having his hands in his pockets in his latest photograph. And yet, since this Equitable scandal, we ought to be grateful to a man who has his hands in his own pockets.

Delavan Enterprise: A street fakir of the performing type did several clever acts on Avenue Park, yesterday afternoon and evening, his act being fairly good. The best place to watch such events is from a roof where the collection misses you.

Evansville Review: Tuesday last, not an Evansville official was to be found in the city. The mayor was attending a funeral at Stoughton, chief of police in a neighboring town playing ball, assistant police at the lake camping, superintendent of water works at Kenosha and the city clerk camping at Lake Kegonsa.

Racine Journal: A Panama emergency call has exhausted the supply of insect powder, 38 tons, nearly all of the supply on hand, being called for by the canal commissioners. The government is bound to make the workers as comfortable as will be possible and insure their health.

Lancaster Herald: A new bug has made its appearance in this locality. It is about three-fourths of an inch in length and half an inch in width. It is flat like a stink bug and is armed with a sharp beak. Its food is the young potato bug which it impales on its sharp bill and then proceeds to suck the contents of its victim, leaving nothing but its skeleton.

Green Bay Gazette: In summing up the census situation the La Crosse Leader-Press confesses to its readers that instead of taking second place in size in the state it may have to be satisfied with fifth place, Milwaukee, Racine, Superior and Oshkosh probably going above La Crosse in population. It winds up the mournful story by adding that La Crosse is not discouraged and will keep on growing. It is hoped, however, it will not be in the same backward condition as during the past five years.

Exchange: Here is Senator Vest's view of death:

"When the young, vigorous, ambitious and hopeful are stricken down we are shocked as if before some unfinished statue or painting where the chisel or pencil has fallen from the nervous hand of a great artist; but when life's work is done, when the task is finished, we simply await the inevitable end. Death is oftentimes a friend."

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The work of taking the state so far along that various cities are setting forth their claims. Superior, it seems is occupied second place, while Racine occupies third. The latter city, however, contends, and with justice too, that if her suburbs were incorporated as a part of Racine, just as the suburbs of Superior are made of, finally a part of that place, Racine would be accorded second place in the state.

Edgerton Eagle: Manager Clough of the Janesville-Rockford Interurban line was in Edgerton over Sunday. The presence of a party of surveyors working out of here since Saturday has given rise to more interurban road talk. The party started from the W. T. Pomeroy warehouse and has been working toward Janesville via Indian Ford. They are expected to continue toward Stoughton and Madison. Three franchises have been granted for the building of an electric line through Edgerton during the past three years, all of which have been allowed to lapse.

Clinton Banner: The Clinton K. of P. ball team went to Janesville Tuesday to play a return game with the K. of P. team of that city, strengthened with Broughton of Evansville and Mitchell of Beloit and the umpire. The latter handicap was too great to overcome, and with the rotten decisions of the umpire and the hard and timely hitting of Broughton the Janesville team were winners by a score of 8 to 5. Clinton has played a number of games this year and the umpiring Tuesday was the worst they have yet went up against. He favored Janesville upon every occasion, and one of his decisions was so rotten that even the home players asked him to change it.

Madison Journal: It has long been whispered that Governor La Follette looks to the day when party restrictions will fall to hamper him and he can make his appeal to the full rabble. This teaching is new to Americans, who for over a century, have conducted presidential campaigns on party lines, so the wedge must be inserted gradually. Governor La Follette in his address at the Miami Valley Chautauqua at Franklin, Ohio, said, what he has said before, that "it becomes necessary sometimes to vote against your party nominees in order to whip the bosses."

Boil 'Em In Oil.

Milwaukee News: Though Illinois has a railway rate commission and a "reform" governor, Governor La Follette has found that the corporations in that state are defiant and obstreperous. In making the Chautauqua circuit, the Wisconsin executive and senator-elect has met with corporate insolence. Finding himself on an excursion train he was compelled to stand for two hours. After his experience, the governor is reported to have declared to the reception committee at Galesburg that "I would like to have a band in hand and St. Veyssant Fish." Mr. Fish is president of the Illinois-Central-Railway company and it was on an Illinois Central excursion train that the executive was compelled to stand. If Fish should be hanged, it is reasonable to infer that his successors and the officials of other railways would be more cautious in their excursion train arrangements. It is, indeed, a shame that the governor was obliged to stand. There is nothing more irritating than to be compelled to stand in a crowded car. In expressing a desire to hang the president of the railway, Governor La Follette was altogether too lenient. At the very least, the offending official should be boiled in oil or eaten by ants.

Persistence of the Darker Races.

Thirty years ago it was common enough to meet persons not uneducated who talked as though the darker races were dying out before the gin, gunpowder and disease disseminated by Europeans, says the National Review. Almost every one knows better now—knows that the Chinese, the Hindoo, the Arab, the negro, the chief colored races, in fact, increase and multiply wherever the white man restrains war, famine and pestilence. Even the American Indian between Texas and the Gran Chaco is in no way to be improved off the face of the new world. The education of the colored races and their equipment by European science are only beginning, yet the last decade has witnessed the defeat of two great European powers—one by chocolate faced mountaineers, the other by tawny islanders.

Burial by Machinery.

The Army burial board at Leeds, in England, is considering the desirability of adopting a singular labor saving device for interments, says the London Chronicle. The invention consists of an appliance for lowering the coffin into the grave, and it is claimed that there is nothing to attend the sensibilities of the mourners, the body being lowered slowly and reverently. When the coffin reaches its resting place the girls of the appliance release themselves automatically. The adoption of the invention, it is pointed out, will prevent the painful scenes that sometimes occur at funerals.

One of the Leisure Class.

A statistician has estimated that the bees must visit 62,000,000 beds of clover to produce one pound of honey. The man who figures out these things knows what leisure is.

Candid Criticism.

A well known minister in Boston, in reviewing the Sunday school on a recent Sunday, asked: "How did John the Baptist's preaching differ from mine?" A small boy quickly shouted: "It was much better."

pear Saturday the regular program tomorrow will be slightly altered.
The troupe may take the place which was to have been occupied by Herbert L. Cope, that was given Saturday or Mr. Cope may deliver his lecture "Wrinkles in the afternoon" instead of Wednesday evening. The fea-

Ladies' Quartette will take the place of the Chautauque. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Effie Palmer,

now arranged is as follows:

Advancement Means Increased Business
New Association Starts In on Its Work of Pushing Janesville to the Fore.
Interest in the Janesville Advancement Association is on the increase every day. Already the board of directors have held one meeting and on Thursday will hold their second at which time several propositions for new buildings are being considered.
The association is not yet flooded with applications for factory sites but so many have come in without any effort whatsoever that the outlook is very encouraging. The question as to the memberships has been repeatedly asked and the board of directors announce that they will have the membership certificates ready for the prospective purchasers in a few days. Booming Janesville has become not only a habit but a business and is to be pushed ahead rapidly. Everyone will be given an opportunity to subscribe and doubtless many will avail themselves of the opportunity when the time comes.

WEED COMMISSIONERS HAVE A VERY LONG ROW TO HOE
Vacant Lots Overgrown With Noxious Vegetation Present Formidable Front.
Tall weeds that flourish on vacant lots and parcels of grounds adjoining habitations, are receiving the attention of the commissioners. Those who have permitted them to thrive unmolested will be brought to time and the campaign will be fought out on this line if it takes all summer, according to Weed Commissioner Burdock.

LAYS SCENE OF OPERA IN ROME
DURING TIBERIUS TIME
Mascegni Has Arranged His Coming Production to Fit a Past Period of Time.

completed a new opera called

EDGERTON TEAM BADLY BEATEN

Red Sox Trim Up the Edgerton Base Ball Team Sunday Afternoon.

Sunday afternoon at Crystal Springs Park the Red Sox baseball team easily defeated the Edgerton team by a score of sixteen to one. The visitors started out well but after the fifth inning they lost heart and the home team kept piling up scores until the ninth inning. Hall and Smith were the battery for the Red Sox. Hallett and Chaplin for the Edgerton team.
The feature of the game was Hall's hitting, he having to his credit one home run, two two-base hits, and one three-base hit. The Red Sox will cross bats with the Milton Crescents next Sunday at Lake Koshkonong.

LOCAL EAGLES HAD WINGS LOPPED OFF

In the Baseball Game with Rockford Yesterday—Picnic a Big Success.

Nearly a hundred members of Janesville Lodge No. 724 of the Paternal Order of Eagles and their friends joined the team to Rockford yesterday and an even larger number from Beloit made the journey. The picnic was held at Love's Park and with band music, weather, and a baseball game nothing in the way of entertainment was left to be desired.

The contest on the diamond was between Janesville and Rockford, being the third of a series in which Rockford had twice been beaten, once by the score of 5 to 0 and the second time by the big margin of 24 to 11.
The Forest City Eagles succeeded in winning the final game by a score of 10 to 7.

MAHONEY HAS BECOME AN

J. L. Mahoney, formerly a practicing lawyer in Janesville, is editor and publisher of "Wisconsin Eagle," a new monthly magazine printed at Portage in the interests of the fraternal order from which it takes its name. The number issued has an illuminated cover, some strong and vivid editorials, a generous quantity of good reading matter, and cuts of the state officers—among them J. J.
Cunningham of this city, state treasurer of the order. One of the articles leads off with: "Roosevelt, the great American, is an Eagle."

But it is in Janesville.
THE JOY OF A GOOD CIGAR.

Smith Drug Co. Tell How Smokers
Can Be Sure to Get Their Money's Worth.

"How can one be sure of getting his money's worth in buying a cigar?" asked a Gazette reporter of Mr. Smith of Smith Drug Co.

"I'll tell you how to be sure. Just buy a Wadsworth Bros. Cigar. This cigar is always the same—a good, honest, satisfying smoke. It is made with a long Havana filler, so that it always burns with a firm, solid ash, the best sign of a good cigar."

"The Chico burns with a fragrance like that of the Carolina perfume, a 25c cigar, but it costs only 5c. Our best customers are smoking the Chico, and when they stop in front of the cigar case, they say, 'give us some more of those good cigars.'"

We pass out the Wadsworth Bros.
Chico, and they go away, happy."

"Try a Chico yourself, and see how good it is."

"Oh, good luck, no, your ladyship, nor will he be for hours to come."

The girl's head fell back on her pillow, and she said dreamily, "I thought there had been trouble of some sort and men fighting."

"Indeed, your ladyship, and so there was, a rioting going on all the night. I think the citizens of London are gone mad, bawling in the street at hours when decent folk should be in their beds. 'Tis said that this new parliament is the cause, but how or why I do not know."

Although the Earl of Strafford did not quit his chamber until midnight, he was undoubtedly concerned with affairs that demanded attention from the greatest minister of state. There were constant rumblings to and fro, messengers dispatched and envoys received, with the heavy knocker of the door constantly a-rap. It was two hours after midnight when Strafford sent for his daughter, and she followed his messenger to the library, where she found her father in his chair beside a table, although he was equipped for going forth from the house. There had been seated before him De Courcy, but the young man rose as she entered and greeted her with one of his down reaching bows which set her a-quake lest he should fall forward on his face.

"My child," said the earl, "I am about to set out for parliament, and it may be late before I return. Yet I think you shall sup with me at 7 if all goes well and debate becomes not too strenuous, but do not wait in case I should be detained. I counsel you not to leave the house today, for there seem to be many brawlers on the streets. Any shopman will be pleased to wait upon you and bring samples of his wares, so send a servant for those you wish to consult. My friend De Courcy, here, begs the favor of some converse with you and speaks with my approval."

Strafford looked keenly at the girl, and her heart thrilled as she read the unspoken message with quick intuition. He had some use for De Courcy, and she must be suave and diplomatic. Thus already she was her father's ally, an outpost in his vast concerns now committed to her. The young man saw nothing of this, for he had eyes only for the girl. The broad rim of his feathered hat was at his smiling lips, and his gaze of admiration was as unmistakable as it was intent.

"Sir, I shall obey you in all things and hope to win your commendation," said Frances, with an inclination of the head.

"You are sure of the latter in any case, my child," replied Strafford, rising. "And now, De Courcy, I think we understand each other, and I may rely upon you."

"To the death, my lord," cried the young man, with another of his courtly genuflections.

"Oh, let us hope it will not be necessary quite so far as that. I bid you good day. Tomorrow at this hour I shall look for a report from you. For the moment, goodbye, my daughter."

No sooner was the earl quit of the room and the door closed behind him than De Courcy, with an impetuous movement that startled the girl, flung himself at her feet. Her first impulse was to step quickly back, but she checked it and stood her ground.

"Oh, divine Frances!" he cried, "how impatiently I have waited for this report! When I might declare to you—"

"Sir, I beg of you to rise. 'Tis not seemly you should demean yourself thus."

"'Tis seemly that the whole world should grovel at your feet, my lady of the free forest, for all who look upon you must love you, and for me, who have not the cold heart of this northern people, I adore you, and I do love you."

"You take me at a disadvantage, sir. I have never been spoken to thus. I am but a child and unaccustomed; only sixteen this very day. I ask you to—"

"Most beautiful nymph! How many grand ladies of our court would give all they possess to make such confession truly. Aye, the queen herself. I do assure you, sweetest, such argument will never daunt a lover."

"I implore you, sir, to arise. My father may return."

"That he will not. And if he did 'twould pleasure him to see my suit advancing. I loved you from the first moment I beheld you, and though you used me with continuity, yet I solaced my wounded heart that 'twas me you noticed, and me only, even though your glance was tinged with scorn."

Notwithstanding a situation that called for tact, she was unable to resist a touch of the linguistic rapier, and her eyes twinkled with suppressed merriment as she said, "You forget, sir, that I also distinguished the keeper of the hounds with my regard," but, seeing he winced, she recollected her position and added: "In truth, I was most churlishly rude in the forest, and I am glad you spoke of it, that I now have opportunity to beg your pardon very humbly. I have learned since then that you stand high in my dear father's regard, and indeed he chided me for my violence, as 'twas his duty to do by a wayward child."

The gallant was visibly flattered by this tribute to his amour propre. He seized her hand and pressed his lips to it, the tremor which passed over her at this action being probably misinterpreted by his unapproachable vanity.

The tension was relieved by a low roar from the street, a sound that had in it the menace of some wild beast roused to anger. It brought to the girl a remembrance of her disturbed dreams.

"Good heaven, what is it?" she exclaimed, snatching away her hand and running to the window. Her suit of rose to his feet, faintly dusted the knees of his sliken wear with a flum of lace that did duty for a handkerchief, and followed her.

The street below was packed with people howling round a carriage that seemed blocked by the press. The stout coachman, gorged in splendid livery, had some add to restrain the spirited horses, maddened and prancing with the interference and the outcry. Cudgels were shaken aloft in the air, and there were shouts of "Traitor!" "Tyrant!" and other epithets so degrading that Frances put her hands to her ears in horrified dismay.

"Whom are they threatening so fiendishly?" she whispered.

"That is your father's carriage," answered De Courcy.

Before she could make further inquiry there came up to them the cold, dominating tones of her father's voice, clear above that tumult:

"Strike through!"

The stout coachman laid about him with his whip, and the curses for the moment abandoned the head of Strafford to alight on that of the driver. The horses plunged fiercely into the crowd. The cruel progress changed the terror of the cries, as if a walling stop of a great organ had suddenly taken the place of the open diapason. The press was so great that those in front could not make for safety, and the disappearing coach was greeted with screams of terror and was followed by groans of agony. Men went down before it like ripe grain before a sickle.

"Oh, oh, oh!" moaned the girl, all color leaving her face.

"It serves the dogs right," said De Courcy. "How dare they block the way of a noble, and the chief minister of state."

"I cannot look on this," lamented Frances, shrinking back to the table and leaning against it as one about to faint, forgetting her desire to avoid further demonstration from her companion in the trepidation which followed the scene she had witnessed.

"Indeed they were most mercifully dealt with, those scoundrels. The king of France would have sent a troop of horse to saher them back into their kennels. 'Strike through!' cried his lordship, and 'tis a good phrase, most suitable motto for a coat of arms, a hand grasping a dagger above it. 'Strike through!' I shall not forget it. But 'twas a softer and more endearing theme I wished to—"

"Sir, I beseech your polite consideration. I am much distraught with what I have seen and am filled with a fear of London. 'Tis not the courtly city I expected to behold. I am not myself."

"But you will at least bid me hope?"

"Surely, surely, all of us may hope."

"Why, 'twas the last and only gift left in Pandora's casket, and London were grim indeed to be more bereft than the receptacle of that deceitful woman. May I make my first draft on Madam Pandora's box by hoping that I am to see you at this hour tomorrow?"

"Yes—tomorrow—tomorrow," gasped the girl faintly.

CHAPTER V.

A DRIZZLING rain had set in and had driven the crowds from the streets. Frances drew a chair to the window of the library and sat there meditating on the strange events in which she was taking some small part, so different from the tranquil happenings of the district she had known all her life. She had imagined London a city of palaces facing broad streets, fancied, if not literally, paved with gold—a town of gaiety and laughter; and here was the reality, a cavernous, squalid, gloomy, human warren, peopled with murky demons bent on outrage of some sort, ill natured and threatening.

As the day waned she saw that in spite of the rain the mob was collecting again, its atoms running hither and thither, calling to each other; bedraggled beings laboring under some common excitement. And now its roar came to her again, farther off than before—a roar that chilled her while she listened, and the wave of sound this time seemed to have a fearful note of exultation in it. She wondered what had happened, and was anxious for her father if he were at the mercy of it. Mrs. Jarrett came into the room, followed by a manservant, and also by one of her father's secretaries, as the woman whispered to the girl:

"My lady, we must close the shutters and bar them tightly, for the rollands are threatening again, and may be here in force at any moment to stone the windows, as they have done before."

The secretary seated himself at the table and was arranging papers. The manservant opened the windows, from which Frances drew back, and now the cries came distinctly to her. "Death to Strafford!" "Down with the tyrant!" "To the block with the king's head!" were some of the shouts she heard lustily called forth.

"Oh! I fear my father is in danger. Do you think they have him in their power, that they exert so?"

Good Mrs. Jarrett, anxiety on her own honest face, soothed her young mistress, and the secretary came forth.

"Be not troubled, madam," he said. "While they cry 'To the block!' it shows they have not possession of his lordship's person, but hope to stir up rumor to his disfavor. While they shout for process of law, his lordship is safe. For the law is in his hands and in those of the king, whose behests he carries out."

This seemed a reasonable deduction, and it calmed the inquirer, although there remained to her disquietude the accent of triumph in the voice of the mob.

"Death to Strafford!" was the burden of the acclaim, but now one shouted, "Justice on Strafford!" though his meaning was clearly the same as the others. There was no dissenting outcry, and this unanimous hatred, so rehearsantly expressed, terrified at least one listener. Why was her father so universally detested? What had he done? Stern he was undoubtedly, but just, as his reception of herself had shown, and courteous to all to whom she heard him speak; yet the memory of that phrase, "Strike through!" uttered with such ruthless coldness, haunted her memory, and she heard again the shrieks of those trampled underfoot. It was an indication that what he had to do he did with all his might, reckless of consequence. If any occupied his path, the obstructor had to stand aside or go down, and such a course does not make for popularity.

The windows being now shattered and barred securely, and the tumult muffled into indistinct murmur, lights were brought in. Mrs. Jarrett urged the girl to partake of some refreshment, but Frances insisted on waiting for her father. The secretary, seeing her anxiety, said:

"Mr. Vollins went out some two hours ago to learn what was taking place, and I am sure if anything serious had happened he would have been here before now with tidings."

"Who is Mr. Vollins?"

"His lordship's treasurer, madam." As the words were uttered, the door opened, disclosing John Vollins, the expression of whose serious, clean shaven face gave little promise of encouragement.

"What news, Mr. Vollins? The mob seems rampant again," spoke up the secretary.

"Disquieting news, or I am misled. The rumor is everywhere believed that his lordship was arrested in parliament this afternoon and is now in prison."

"Impossible! 'Twould be a breach of privilege. In parliament! It cannot be. Did you visit the precincts of parliament?"

"No man can get within a mile of it, the mass of people is so great. It seems as if all London were concentrated there, and one is swept hither and thither in the crush like a straw on the billows of the sea. Progress is out of the question except in what ever direction impulse sweeps the mob. There are so many versions of what is supposed to have happened that none can sift the truth. It is said that parliament, behind closed doors, impeached his lordship, and that when he demanded entrance to his place he was arrested by order of the two houses acting conjointly."

"But even if that were true—and it seems incredible—the king can liberate him at a word."

"They say even the king and court have fled and that hereafter parliament will be supreme, but one cannot believe a title of what is lying through the streets this night. The people are mad, stark mad."

Mrs. Jarrett hovered about the young lady in case an announcement so fraught with dread to all of them should prove too much for her, but Frances was the most collected of any there. "If that is all," she said calmly, "I will be a temporary inconvenience to my father which he will make little of. He has committed no crime, and may face with fortitude the judgment of his peers, certain of triumphant acquittal. He is in London by command of the king, his master, and his majesty will see to it should all else fail, that he suffers not for his obedience."

This conclusion was so reasonable that it had the effect of soothing the apprehensions of all who heard it, and, young as she was, Frances seemed to assume a place of authority in the estimation of those present, which was to stand her in good stead later in the evening.

It was after 9 o'clock that there was a rap at the door.

"Who is there?" asked the secretary through the grating.

"A messenger from the court," was the reply. Frances had come up the hall on hearing the challenge.

"What name?" demanded the secretary.

"De Courcy. Open quickly, I beg of you. The mob has surged down the street, but it may return at any moment."

"Open," said Frances, with decision, and the secretary obeyed.

De Courcy came in, unrecognized at first because of the cloak that enveloped him, and he hung his cloak to one of the men standing there. His gay plumage was somewhat ruffled, and the girl never thought she would be so heartily glad to see him.

"Is it true that my father is sent to the Tower?" were her first words.

"No, mademoiselle; but he is in custody, arrested by order of parliament, and at this moment detained in the house of James Maxwell, keeper of the Black Rod, who took his sword from him and is responsible for his safety. 'Tis said he will be taken to the Tower tomorrow, but they reckon not on the good will of some of us who are his friends, and they forget the power of the king."

Frances frowned, but said:

"What were the circumstances of my father's arrest? What do they charge against him?"

ARTIFICIAL FEEDING OF INFANTS.

In previously considering the subject it was learned that one must have some knowledge of the different characteristics, not only of the foods offered from which to select, but, most important of all, the various constitutional and hereditary endowments of the child to be fed. Not only must these two things be considered but the financial condition of the parents, or those upon whom the little speck of humanity is dependent.

The item of milk is not a small portion of the expenses in the families of the poor, and it is not an unusual thing for the physician to find a puny, sickly baby being fed upon the poorest and cheapest kind of condensed milk. The after effect of such a course will be discussed later on. For the present the difference between cow's milk and human milk must receive attention.

There is in the ordinary cow's milk only about one-half the amount of sugar that is present in the human milk; moreover the curd that may be derived from human milk is only about one-fifth as much as can be obtained from the same quantity of cow's milk. There are other striking differences, as, for instance, the amount of casein precipitated by acid and subject to coagulation, when the ingredients of both kinds of milk are compared. A scientific study of these differences proves the necessity of diluting cow's milk when it is to be used for very young infants. By adding two parts of water to one of milk about the proper amount of casein is retained; yet the addition of water still further reduces the amount of sugar and fat, which are already too low. As a result, the infant fed upon diluted cow's milk must partake of a larger quantity in order to get the same amount of nutriment that would be secured by a breast-fed infant. The result of this overfeeding is quite likely to be distention and enfeeblement of the stomach.

To overcome this defect the fat may be increased by allowing the cow's milk to stand about eight hours, and then taking only the top, or the cream, after which we can secure the proper amount of sugar by adding sugar of milk—about one teaspoonful to four ounces of diluted cream. Ordinary cane or beet sugar is not so good, as it is likely to cause fermentation, but if it must be used there should be added only one teaspoonful to six ounces of the diluted milk.

In estimating the amount of cream, in the absence of accurate measuring apparatus, remember that a quart of good milk will yield about six ounces of cream of the richness desired, while poor milk will yield about four ounces, or sometimes even less. If the top milk, as some call the cream, is not obtained in this way, then when they are purchased separately equal parts of cream and milk may be used, diluted and prepared as above directed. Frequently babies fed in this way will throw up large curds and give other evidences of dyspepsia. In such cases barley water instead of plain water, in the same proportion, should be used.

The preparation of this barley water should be a matter of considerable attention on the part of the mother, or attendant. In using pearl barley it is found necessary to boil it for a long time—say six or eight hours—renewing the water as it evaporates. As a rule, the proper proportion is two tablespoonfuls of pearl barley to one quart of water. Barley flour, if it can be secured, should be used in the same proportion, but it requires much less time to prepare—from one-half to an hour's boiling being sufficient. In either case, when the boiling is finished, it is then to be carefully strained through a linen cloth, a little salt added, and when cool it is ready to use.

A very good and reliable formula, given by Dr. Holt, is to take of cream or top milk eight ounces; barley water 16 ounces, sugar of milk, six heaping teaspoons, or of cane sugar, four teaspoons. This will give sufficient quantity to last a two-months' old infant for 24 hours. The proportion may be kept the same, but the quantity gradually increased, until about the eighth month, when the following would more nearly supply the little one's needs: cream, 10 ounces; barley water, 19 ounces; sugar of milk, nine teaspoonfuls, or cane sugar, five teaspoonfuls.

Many children can take plain cow's milk, and appear to thrive upon it, to such an extent, that other foods or modifications are deemed unnecessary; but such cases are the exception and not the rule. In selecting or preparing a diet for any infant, child or adult, common sense and observation are essential elements, and unless this mixture is used, the chances are about even as to whether a sickly or healthy child will be the result of all the time and labor expended.

I would advise all parents against the use of peptonized milk, such as may be found on sale in many drug and grocery stores. The child's stomach is capable of supplying all the pepsin it needs, and as a rule, the result of using such milk will be, to say the least, unfavorable. Good, pure, fresh cow's milk is the product that all mothers should seek to secure, and if one lives in the country, or even in a small city, this can always be had; but in the large cities it is almost impossible to procure the pure article.

Then there must be another process adopted, although not so good, and that is called sterilization or Pasteurizing, in order to destroy unhealthy substances that may have been absorbed by the milk while passing through the various hands on its way from the country to the city. However, milk that is to be used for feeding infants should be kept pure, cool and fresh. How to do this is often a problem not easily solved. The modern method of keeping a refrigerator in each household and supplying it with a quantity of ice each day, solves the question, after the milk has been received; but it is sometimes impossible to know how the milk has been previously cared for. If one could have everything arranged properly, the milk should be placed upon ice immediately after being received from the cow, and reduced to a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit. The car which brings it to the city should be arranged to keep it at the same temperature; and the wagon which delivers it to the homes should also be packed with ice for the same purpose. It is very important that this regime be observed, and the milk not allowed to stand uncovered, nor become lukewarm. Many dairymen now put all their milk, for family use, in pint, quart and gallon bottles, guaranteeing that the bottles have been sterilized, and the milk kept in an even temperature. Such dealers should be encouraged by the patronage of the Home Health club everywhere.

There was at one time a widespread notion that the milk of one certain cow should be kept separate for the baby's use; but experience proves that this was a mistake, and that the little ones do better when the milk of several cows has been mixed. Dyspepsia is not likely to follow.

In caring for the bottles or other receptacles, in which the milk or food is kept, care should be taken to first wash them out with cold water, and then scald them thoroughly. If the scalding is done first, small curds of milk are liable to stick to the inside of the bottle and cause fermentation.

CLUB NOTES.

Town.—Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I wish to write to you for information regarding my fingers. The joints are becoming enlarged and bother me quite a good deal and more especially the first joint of the forefinger of each hand. I used to be troubled a little with rheumatism in one of my forefingers, but not to amount to anything. The joints are red and swollen. Some are sore but do not pain me, but if I put them in cold water or get them cold in any way, they ache. I will be grateful for any information leading to a cure. I would also like to know the cause of my heart palpitating or rebounding. Sometimes it is only a quivering and then it will palpitate until it jars or jolts me so it is noticeable quite a little distance from me. Thanking you in advance for any advice you may give me, I am, respectfully, Mrs. G. E.

The enlarged joints are no doubt caused by a form of rheumatism, and you can best treat them at home by using the method of treatment described in the book of lectures, and also by the use of the Schuessler tissue elements of which I have often spoken in these columns. These tissue elements supply to the diseased tissues the elements which are lacking, thus removing the cause of the difficulty. These tissue elements are taken internally, and can usually be secured in tablet form, in attenuated doses.

As your heart difficulty is without doubt caused by gas in the stomach, you should procure a means for its removal. I would suggest that you use charcoal tablets or a little oil of lavender for immediate relief. These remedies do not permanently remove the cause of the accumulation, but simply disperse the gas itself for the time being. You should, however, remove the cause and this can be done by following the specific directions given in my letter written to you personally. By following these directions you will be relieved promptly, and when the accumulation of gas is overcome, you will notice that the palpitation, etc., ceases. The gas pressing against the diaphragm raises it, which in turn irritates the heart, causing the disagreeable sensations mentioned. I think if you will follow these suggestions you will secure entire relief.

All readers of this paper are at liberty to write for information pertaining to the subject of health. All communications should be addressed to Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind., and must contain name and address in full and at least four cents in postage.

Fish as Food.

Fish, because of its tendency rapidly to decompose, holds a peculiar position among foods. In England it is the subject of a special act of parliament. So long ago as 1693 men knew the evil consequences resulting from eating mackerel of uncertain post-mortem age. So they passed an act providing that except during the hours of divine service this fish could be sold on Sunday. This act has never been repealed.

An Insurance View.

Howell—Don't you wish you could live your life over again?
Powell—Well, I should say not! I've got a 20-year endowment policy maturing next month.—Judge.

New Road in Panama.

The road from the port of Aguadulce to the city of Aguadulce with the necessary bridges and grades is almost complete, says the Panama Star and Herald. It will continue through Aguadulce to the Santa Maria river, which will be crossed by an immense steel bridge.

WAR ON YELLOW FEVER

Panama Nurse's Experience In Fighting the Disease.

TRIPS OF THE "DEAD TRAIN"

Miss A. A. Robinson Says It Certainly Runs to the Cemetery Once a Day. Sometimes Offense—Physical Discomforts Great, but They Are Nothing, She Finds, to the Mental Strain—Many Nurses Coming Home.

"There is no doubt that the yellow fever situation on the isthmus of Panama is grave and growing rapidly more acute," said Miss A. A. Robinson of New York, one of the nurses who returned to New York recently from Colon by the steamship Advance, says the New York Tribune. Miss Robinson has been a year on the isthmus, first as nurse at the Ancon hospital and later as matron at the hospital in Colon.

"Governor Magoon is very anxious, and so are the physicians, for yellow fever strikes down the white man, while the negro is immune. Some of the finest young men who have gone to the isthmus since I have been there have died of it, and they were well set up, clean boys, with good principles. Deaths occur right along. It doesn't seem to be the fault of the government or of any one in particular, but it is agreed on all hands that what should have been done before a spadeful of earth was dug out of the canal was to provide good sanitary quarters for the engineers and others who were to work there. Why, these poor fellows have been drinking unfiltered rain water, and a number of them came down without mosquito bars, which are a necessity of life in a region where the mosquito carries the yellow fever infection."

Asked as to the "dead train" which, it has been stated, runs from Colon to Monkey Hill cemetery, a mile and a half south, always once and sometimes as many as fourteen times a day, Miss Robinson replied: "The train certainly runs to the cemetery once a day, sometimes often, but I never knew it to run fourteen times. The truth is that, while there has been just as much yellow fever in the isthmus since the American occupation as before, the deaths are fewer by far. There are now about fifty American trained nurses down there. Before we came there the two hospitals were in charge of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul. In those days there was a steady procession of the dead on their way to the cemetery. The sisters used to lock up the wards at night and go home. In the morning they would come and unlock them and find some of their patients dead. They were lovely women, but quite innocent of all the elements of modern nursing, as we found when those who remained for awhile after we came helped with the diets. They thought it so cruel in us to have a nurse or orderly sit up all night in each ward and hold up their hands in amazement at the mention of ice bags, typhoid baths and antiseptic surgery."

Miss Robinson is a Boston girl and a graduate of the Hartford Hospital Training School for Nurses. She went out with a party of eight other nurses on July 12, 1904.

"No more isthmus of Panama for me," she said. "The physical discomforts are great, but they are nothing to the mental strain. There is absolutely no recreation—no music, no churches, no bathing, no books or magazines, no driving except round and round inside the towns. Nobody ever walks, and athletic sports are impossible in a climate that has six months of rainy season and is all the time like a warm vapor bath. The bare monotony of the nurse's existence is appalling."

"The food is good, although American food was at first very hard to obtain, and fresh vegetables are scarce and fish rare on account of a tax that is placed on it. The hospital buildings are good, the nurses' quarters are comfortable, the hours are no longer than here in New York, but the absolute stagnation of the mental and emotional life wears one out. Many of the nurses are coming home, though there is no organized strike or revolt. Fifty dollars a month is what they get to begin on. If they give satisfaction it is later raised to $60. Of course board, lodging and laundry are found."

"Under Governor Davis the hospitals were sorely handicapped for supplies, owing, I suppose, to the desire of the governor to keep expenses down to their minimum."

"To illustrate: It used to be my duty as matron to make out the requisitions for each day's supplies. Fifty pounds of ice was just sufficient to give us what we needed for the twenty-four hours. Day after day Governor Davis would cut this down to twenty-five pounds, with the result that our American boys would toss about for eight or ten hours burning up for lack of a cooling drink. Under Governor Magoon all this has been changed."

Why should the trained nurse who can earn her $25 a week straight along in New York city elect to nurse in a government hospital in Panama for $60 a month, with no end of privation thrown in? Miss Robinson scouted the notion that patriotism had anything to do with it.

"They are mostly either army nurses or nurses who are tired to death of private nursing and want a change," she said. "That was why I went—I wanted a change."

Conductors Must Learn English. Conductors on the German state railways are to be discharged unless they can pass an examination in the English and French languages. Some of them have been twenty years in the service.

Americans to Grow Tea.

Americans and American capital are going into Ceylon to assist in the development of the tea-growing industry this year as never before.

GOAT AS "LAMB CROPS."

How the Festive Dilly Is Transformed by Butchers.

Goat, says the department of agriculture in a bulletin recently issued, goat, common garden goat, supplies a considerable part of the "lamb" and "mutton" handled by the great packing houses and sold by the wholesalers and retailers all over the country.

An expert named Thompson, who conducted the goat investigation, relates as follows in his report upon goat as a table delicacy, says a Washington dispatch to the Kansas City Star: "It is generally agreed by those who speak from experience that the kids of all breeds of goats are a table delicacy. It is true that among the great masses of the people of this country there is a remarkable and well-grounded prejudice against anything bearing the name of goat."

"Within the environments of the larger cities are found many kids, and it is evident that only a few of them ever grow to maturity. What becomes of the rest? Butchers and meat dealers answer this question by saying that they are sold as lamb. No meat dealer has ever heard a complaint against the quality of such lamb."

"A considerable number of middle aged and old mongrel goats are purchased by the packing houses of the larger cities. They are purchased as goat, but are sold as mutton, and many of those who so strenuously condemn goat have eaten it a score of times."

Mr. Thompson adds that the elderly goat is not as good as good mutton, but that it is not any worse than bad mutton. He insists that the prejudice against it would disappear if the people would only make a test and eat goat as goat instead of as lamb. He is not very hopeful, however, of such a result. Mr. Thompson is George Fayette Thompson, editor of the Bureau of Animal Industry. He started upon his goat report with the purpose of answering the numerous inquiries which have reached the bureau as to the possibility of creating a goat industry in the United States. It was while incidentally remarking upon the present size of the industry that he made the startling statements which confounded our morning lamb with goat chops.

WITHIN A FLOWERY FENCE.

Novel Features Planned For the Jamestown Exhibition In 1907.

Flower displays will be a feature of the Jamestown exhibition in 1907 on the shore of the Hampton Roads, between Norfolk and Fort Monroe, says the Washington Post.

Over 5,000 small plants were gathered last winter for use on the grounds. There are more honeysuckle slips than any other shrubs or vines. Nearly 125,000 honeysuckle plants were secured. Next in number come slips of periwinkle, and third are the trumpet vine plants. Recently the grounds were inclosed by a wire fence stretched on decorative posts. This fence will be covered with flowers and verdure.

Twenty thousand rosebushes have been placed along the lines of wire, and trumpet vine and honeysuckle have been planted at intervals. Before the gates of the exposition open a thick mass of green, commingling with honeysuckle, flowers and red roses, will alight all outside view.

It has been part of the decorative plan evolved by the board of design that native plants should be used as far as possible. Fifty thousand European private cuttings, such as are in use for hedges in England, will be used, as well as between 10,000 and 20,000 cuttings of mountain laurel and willow and miscellaneous collections from old Virginia gardens. Among the large shrubs will be hollys, red maples, locusts, flowering dogwood, apple and cherry trees, red cedar, paper mulberries and water oaks.

Several thousand willows are already in position. It has been the design to preserve the natural features of the grounds wherever possible. The portion of tide-water Virginia where the exhibition is to be held is known for the luxuriance with which plants and flowers grow.
